Course Description and Goals

This lecture and discussion course explores the history of the US economy and the history of capitalism in the USA, from the colonial era to the 21st century, with special attention to the development of business enterprises, business-labor relations, and business-government relations. Among the major topics treated include agriculture, labor, and commerce in the colonial-era Atlantic world; the rise and fall of slavery; industrialization; money, banking, and finance; the rise of "big business" and antitrust regulation; lobbying; the rise and decline of organized labor; the New Deal order; the changing position of the USA in the global economy; and recent trends in the direction of de-industrialization, "financialization," and growing inequalities of income and wealth.

One important element of this course is a series of talks by outside speakers, including academic experts and business leaders. Funding for these talks has been generously provided by the Dowd Foundation of Charlotte.

By the end of this course, students will have a richer understanding of the history of capitalism and the past and present dynamics of the US economy. Course assignments require that students hone their skills in critical evaluation of qualitative and quantitative evidence, original historical research, and advanced analytical writing.

Attendance, Etiquette, and Participation

Attendance is required; attendance will be taken each day, using a seating chart and/or the short answers to in-class exercises, submitted by individuals and teams. You should plan on attending every single class meeting. Most class sessions will include short exercises completed in teams, which will be formed during the second week of the course.

All exams and other assignments assume that students have attended each class meeting and have carefully followed each lecture and discussion. If an emergency causes you to miss a class meeting, you should contact the instructor or a fellow student to ask about the content of that meeting. If you have a lengthy illness or other persistent problem that causes you to miss more than two class meetings, you should contact the Dean of Students and speak with the instructor.

During class, turn off electronic devices (unless they are used to take notes for personal use), be on time for class, stay for the duration, and be respectful when others are speaking. Each student should plan on contributing to class discussions at least a couple of times during the semester by offering comments or raising questions. All students will benefit from taking notes during class.
Readings
There are two required books for this course:

Both books are available for purchase at the University Bookstore and Gray’s, and on reserve at the circulation/reserves desk on the first floor of the UNCC library.

Please purchase also one “blue book” (blank examination book) from one of the bookstores, so that you can use it for the midterm exam.

In addition, students will read a variety of primary and secondary sources (such as journal articles), available for free via Atkins Library and the internet. Whenever possible, direct links to the readings will be provided in the syllabus and on the course’s Canvas page.

Exams
This course includes one in-class midterm exam, scheduled for October 3. This exam will be written in a “blue book” (stapled, lined examination notebook), which you should purchase as soon as possible, at the UNCC bookstore or Gray’s. The final exam is a take-home exam, due on Dec. 14. Both exams will require you to answer questions with full paragraphs and short multi-paragraph essays. Make-up exams will be given only to students who have a valid and documented medical or activities-related excuse.

Short Research Project
Students will complete a short original research project, which may be done individually or in pairs or teams. In this project, you will have the freedom to ask and answer a question, related to the subject of the course, which interests you. One good option is to design a project using one of the business history-related collections in UNCC’s Special Collections department, on the 10th floor of Atkins Library. However, depending on your interests and the flexibility of your schedule, you may choose to use non-archival primary sources, such as magazines and newspapers, corporate annual reports, digitized documents, etc. Deadlines for various stages of this project, including proposals and drafts, are noted in the course calendar. The end product will be short, article-style report of research findings, of approximately 1,500-2,000 words, or the equivalent, in another format. Every research report must include some elementary quantitative analysis, including at least one table and at least one chart or other data visualization. We will discuss details in class.

Academic Integrity:
Academic honesty and integrity are essential to the existence and growth of an academic community. Without the maintenance of high standards of honesty, members of the instructional faculty are defrauded, students are unfairly treated, and society itself is poorly served. Maintaining academic standards of honesty and integrity is ultimately the formal responsibility of the instructional faculty; and this responsibility is shared by all members of the academic community. For a formal statement of university policy on this matter, see http://www.legal.uncc.edu/policies/ps-105.html
Plagiarism on any assignment will bring a minimum penalty of zero credit for the assignment, as well as an academic settlement that will likely result in a minimum of recording the violation with the Dean of Students. More severe penalties, including an F for the course, may also be imposed, depending on the circumstances. For guidance on how to avoid plagiarism and its consequences, please visit http://history.uncc.edu/Student-Resources/plagiarism

Diversity:

UNC Charlotte strives to create an academic climate in which the diversity of all individuals is respected and maintained. Therefore we celebrate diversity that includes, but is not limited to, ability/disability, age, culture, ethnicity, gender, language, race, religion, sexual orientation, and socio-economic status.

Disability:

UNC Charlotte is committed to access to education. If you have a disability and need academic accommodations, please provide a letter of accommodation from Disability Services early in the semester. For more information on accommodations, contact the Office of Disability Services at 704-687-0040 or visit their office in Fretwell 230.
